100,000 vibrant tulips are taking over San Francisco's Union Square on March 7

By Howard Halle
Posted: Thursday February 27 2020, 12:07pm

Tulip mania is about to hit The City by the Bay in a major way. On Saturday March 7, the third annual edition of Flower Bulb Day 2020 will be painting San Francisco's Union Square in a botanical palette of rainbow colors, thanks to a temporarily installed garden planted with 100,000 fully grown tulips. You heard that right—100,000 tulips and they are free for the picking!

Thousands of tulips will take over San Francisco's Union Square

By Carolyn McArdle
February 27, 2020

San Francisco's annual tulip garden featuring more than 100,000 tulips will be popping up at Union Square on Saturday, March 7.

From 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. you can visit the tulip garden for free and you're invited to pick your own bunch of tulips to welcome the spring season.

It's all made possible thanks to Dutch flower bulb trader Royal Anholt, Bulb.org and the Consulate of General of San Francisco, who are transporting the tulips.

The tulips are first-come first-served so go early!

The first weekend of March brings a berry of festivals and fairs. Kick things off with a celebration of women in science, before sampling the taste of earth-shakable molasses or browsing crystals and minerals. There's also a chance to pick tulips for free at Union Square on Saturday and free craft chocolate at Valencia Beach.

Here's where to get out and about in San Francisco this weekend.

America's Tulip Day 2018

Editor's Note: This event has canceled the majority of festivities amid rising coronavirus concerns, in use on one pop-up flower garden, many across volunteers will be handing out bouquets of tulips on a first-come-first serve basis.

"We are deeply saddened to have to cancel Flower Bulb Day 2020 on such short notice, however, we understand the gravity of the situation and agree that keeping the public safe and healthy is more important as this time."

Hook Westcoast, Chairman of Royal Anthos, said in a statement on March 2: "While our 2020 event will no longer take place in the way we had planned, we look forward to returning next year to continue to raise awareness of cut tulips across the Bay Area. Please continue to support the event."

A stunning celebration during which 100,000 colorful varieties of American-produced tulips grown from European bulbs will take over San Francisco's iconic Union Square on Saturday, March 7, 2020. Presented by Royal Anthos, with additional backing and support from the European Union, the free "tulip

San Francisco's Union Square will be saturated in the colors of 100,000 tulip bulbs for Flower Day 2020 Saturday, March 7.

The event, which includes a free "tulip garden" where people are encouraged to pick their own bunch of tulips to take home to welcome spring, opens place from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

Flower Bulb Day is presented by Royal Anthos, with support from the European Union, the San Francisco Recreation and Park Department, and the Union Square Business Improvement District. Royal Anthos represents companies that trade in flower bulbs and nursery stock products in Europe and abroad.

According to a news release, Flower Bulb Day celebrates and showcases the beauty and availability of classic European flower bulbs. European traders export flower bulbs to more than 100 countries worldwide and the U.S. is by far the largest export market. The release noted, European traders alone export approximately 100 different species of flower bulbs annually, including lilies, hyacinths, daffodils, daisies, gladioli, and of course, tulips.

Union Square is located near the Powell Street BART and Muni stations. A large turnout is anticipated and organizers encourage people to use public transportation.

COVID-19 impacts Tulip Day Festival pickings

March 10, 2020

The annual "see pick & see" American Tulip Day event kept its safe this year and had volunteers hand out tulips with caution avoid growing health concerns. This is a record year for the event. Many people had to wait in line to get tulips. The event was held on Saturday, March 7, at Union Square in San Francisco. Despite the rain and COVID-19 health fears, the event was a success. It's that time of year again. 100,000 FREE pick-your-own tulips at Union Square, San Francisco.

Yes, that's correct. On Saturday, March 7, over 100,000 tulips will cover Union Square in San Francisco. Best of all, you're invited to visit the site and pick your own bunch of tulips to take home.

A gift from Dutch flower bulb trader Royal Anthos. (Bulb.org and the Consulate General of the Netherlands in San Francisco, they are transporting thousands of multicolor tulips to the bustling tourist area of Union Square. This event will run from 1:00PM to 4:30PM, by which time all tulips will have been picked and on their way to bring springtime cheer to many, many households.

You have to love all the special FREE events in San Francisco, thanks to the courtesy of many.

Flower Bulb Day in San Francisco

March 7, 2020

The garden in Laidback to pick their own free tulips to take home on Flower Bulb Day 2020.

I'd never heard of Flower Bulb Day to be held on March 7 in 2020, before and find it awfully early in the season for a world celebration of flower bulbs. I mean, even Keukenhof Gardens, located in the Netherlands, the world's foremost bulb gardens, isn't open yet (it runs from March 29 to May 30 in 2020). But still, there'll be a big event in San Francisco on March 7, with free tulips galore, and all you can do is to pick them up.

Here's part of the press release:

Events: The winter rains have subsided, the holidays are a distant speck in the rearview mirror and it's now the time of year when events around the city become more prevalent. This weekend is a prime example as multiple events are scheduled, including the return of beach sessions at Ocean Beach from March 1 to October 31. Head to Union Square on Saturday for a free pickyourown tulips event during American Tulip Day. On Sunday, the San Ale Music Festival celebrates its 11th year with a celebration of contemporary music at the San Francisco. For those looking to support a good cause as well as dive into the frigid waters of the Bay, head up to Aquatic Park for the 2020 Dash and Splash. On Sunday, the 42nd annual Chinese New Year YMYCA Run will take place, benefiting the Chinatown YMYCA Community Center. Be sure to check out all of the city's free monthly museum, shops, too, as each weekend events new opportunities to visit you for month of San Francisco's many museums for free.
